THE LAW OF NEWSPAPERS.

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to receive their subscriptions.

2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers can continue to send them until all arrears are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect to refuse to take their papers from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they refuse to take them, and order the paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to another place without informing the publisher, and their paper is sent to the old address, the publisher is not responsible.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take a newspaper from the office, or removing and leaving it, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Poetry.

THE LITTLE BOY THAT DIED.

I am all alone in my chamber now,

And the midnight hour is near.

And the faintest sound I hear,

Is the only sound I hear.

All over my soul in its solitude,

Sweet feelings of gladness glide.

For my heart and my eyes are full when I think

Of the little boy that died.

I went one night to my father's house—

Went home to the dear ones all—

And softly opened the garden gate.

And softly the door of the hall.

My mother came out to meet her son—

She kissed me, then she sighed.

And her head fell on my neck and wept.

For the little boy that died.

I shall miss him when the flowers come,

In the garden where he played.

I shall miss him more by the fire-side,

When the flowers have all decayed.

I shall see his toys and his empty chair,

And the lone he used to ride.

And they will speak with a silent speech,

Of the little boy that died.

We shall go home to our father's house—

To our father in the skies.

Where the hope of our souls shall have no blight,

Our love no broken ties.

We shall roam on the banks of the river of

And bathe in its blissful tide.

And one of the joys of heaven shall be

The little boy that died.

THE DEAD ARM.

"Do you see that arm?"

The convict, wasted by a fierce disease,

Raised himself to a sitting posture

In the bed with much labor, and lifting his withered right arm with the other, clutched it as if he would wring it from its socket, as a traitorous member of his body.

"That arm did it," and he glared vengefully upon it, and shook it fiercely.

"Did what?"

"Did murder! Put me here to live a buried life for ten long years. Oh! how long they have been! I have counted their hour after hour in my cell. How long can I live at the most?"

"Three hours—perhaps four."

"Too long to live, but sufficient time in which to tell my story. If you be lieve it, it will be more than judge or jury have done. Would you deceive when on your death-bed?"

"My marriage to the girl I had long loved, and who loved me with a love far exceeding my most sanguine hopes, is the point, as far as regards the nice applicability of the past events to present certainties, at which my narrative commences. Dating from the day of that marriage, I begin a succession of misfortunes, that insignificant at their birth, were gradually moulded together by execrable contingencies, until they culminated in an act foul and terrible if premeditated or intended, that made me a branded felon.

"My wife and I never quarreled—

We loved and revered each other too much to trespass or trample upon what the other considered sacred. To be sure, in mere levity and exultation of spirits, we performed acts that, to persons unacquainted with us and our circumstances, might seem seasoned with carelessness.

"To such misunderstanding, by a third person, may be attributed the series of reports that we, my wife and I, lived an unhappy life—a life of turmoil —of blows.

"Many around us held to such an opinion, but from mere ignorance of the exact nature of our lives.

"But I, descending speedily to the ground, do declare that we never, by word or deed, transcended the bounds of our great love for each other; or transgressed those laws that should preserve the person of the wife from blow or contumely. If it were possible to POMEROY, MEIGS COUNTY, OHIO, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 14, 1890.

blind, or the nibbling of a mouse, seemed like a peal of thunder to my ears; the overstrained eye saw, or seemed to see, a deadly serpent from the chandelier to the bed-post.

"I dared not shout aloud nor change my position in bed for fear that my throat would be clutched by the incubus that sat like a hideous night mare fully developed into a reality upon my chest.

"I experienced such sensation as does the strong swimmer or the voracious fish, when coming into bodily contact unforewarned, with a creature beneath the surface of the water—when nature acts like an electric battery, and discharges volumes of fear at the slightest movement; or like one in the dark, who encounters a skeleton.

"I was peculiarly situated; surrounded by an immensity of terror; expansive, inasmuch as it draped thoughts and motions in habiliments that gave them a gi-gantic appearance; immersed in a sea of dread and doubt, and finally completely cowed by fear.

"Now reason made its appeal to the frightened soul. The mere consciousness of bodily contact with this invisibility suggested its substantiality, but I hesitated to make the first movement hasty or otherwise. There was a half-formed supposition in my mind that if I stirred there would come upon me an onset by the incubus that I could not withhold; this hesitancy to action I partly overcame by the circumspect rising of my left arm—it was free. I moved my right instantly, and contemporaneously with that movement, and that it was my face was removed to my neck. A little more stealthy investigation, still fearful of an attack by an insidious enemy, and I found that my right hand and arm as far as the elbow was temporarily paralyzed, or in that condition called 'asleep,' that the hand was cold and without feeling, and that it was</
